

Participants Sought for a Alpha 1 Antitrypsin Deficiency (A1AD) Research Study

University of Arizona is seeking individuals with A1AD to participate in a research study funded by The National Heart, Lung, and Blood Institute (NHLBI), a component of the National Institutes of Health (NIH).

This study aimed at gaining a better understanding of this disease.

Some or all of the following procedures will occur: physical examination, blood draw, stool sample collection, bronchoscopy, CT scan of the chest, pulmonary function tests, and completion of several questionnaires.

Compensation provided.

Please call or email to learn more about our research.
Please say you are calling about the “GRADS Alpha 1 Study”.

(520)626-4110

ncasanova@email.arizona.edu